Discover what to do Following an Auto Accident in Orange California - Laws are in place to protect victims of car accidents following a car crash they did not cause. These rights include the right to file a lawsuit against the driver or person who caused the accident in the first place. Automobile liability insurance is also mandatory in California, so many will have the option of first filing a personal injury insurance claim and pursuing a settlement via that route.

The actions that one takes following the moments after a car or truck crash often significantly change the posture of a personal injury insurance claim. The Napolin Law Firm highly recommends that anyone who falls victim to a car accident follow a specific set of steps in order to protect their rights, preserve claim value and safeguard their well-being and health. If there is a life threatening health condition or injury, the police and paramedic should be called ASAP for emergency medical attention. Calling 911 and explaining that an ambulance is necessary should suffice to get them to the scene. In addition, police write official reports that can identify witnesses and take down statements. Experienced car crash attorneys at The Napolin Law Firm Orange County know that the insurance claim posture will be much easier for the claimant with police report that documents the situation.

It is also imperative that drivers and passengers document the scene of the accident. Leaving everything up to a police officer could prove detrimental because they don't always take down all the details. Obtain the other parties insurance registration and license information. Take pictures of all of their documentation. Then take pictures of the car damages. If you are too injured, make sure a family member arrives at the scene of the car wreck to help. Finally, since some injuries take time to crop up, it is important to seek medical attention immediately if anything is remotely suspected. Whiplash injury may not appear for hours and sometimes won't appear for days. Do not get caught telling an insurance carrier that you are not injured if its possible that injuries may arise later. The adjuster uses that recorded statement against you forever..

Do Injury Victims Need an Attorney After a Car Accident - Not everyone seeks an attorney for a car accident. It is completely allowed to represent oneself on an insurance claim and in a court of law by the filing of a formal complaint and lawsuit. However, without proper legal advocacy in the claims and lawsuit proecess, it is unlikely that much money will be obtained by settlement or award. Attorneys know how the insurance carrier operates and have the resources and legal know-how to fight back against their deep pockets and teams of lawyers. Personal injury law is a quite complex for someone who hasn't received professional training and practiced for a number of years litigating cases. Due to this fact, those injured in Car Accidents in Orange County California are encouraged to seek help from The Napolin Law Firm team in their corner fighting for their rights.
